Henry J. Cadbury Scholarship

THIS PENDLE HILL SCHOLARSHIP has been established as an endowment to support and encourage scholars with serious interest in Quaker faith, practice, or history to work at Pendle Hill on a specific project of significance to the Religious Society of Friends. Henry J. Cadbury, Bible scholar, Quaker historian, and Harvard professor, served Pendle Hill for 52 years as teacher, lecturer, mentor and member of its founding committee. The scholarship which carries his name is intended to preserve and encourage the standards of academic pursuit which Henry J. Cadbury personified.

THE GRANT PROVIDES room and board for the maximum duration of study covered by the full distribution of this fund in a year at Pendle Hill – with lengthy and rigorous scholarship expected. Allowance for transportation and other expenses while at Pendle Hill is not included. The structure of community life at Pendle Hill and the outstanding Quaker collections at Pendle Hill and neighboring Swarthmore and Haverford Colleges are available to the Cadbury scholar. Because of the amount of work involved in serious scholarship, this grant is not intended to give Cadbury Scholars a complete student experience at Pendle Hill, but rather to make Pendle Hill available to the scholar as a physical and spiritual resource. There will be opportunity to audit relevant courses at Swarthmore College if desired and participate in any Quakerism courses at Pendle Hill that are available during the period of scholarship. Although scholars are not required to take courses, regular participation in daily worship and weekly meetings with a staff consultant are recommended.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE:

- Membership in the Religious Society of Friends
- English language fluency
- Demonstrated commitment to appropriate research
- A promising project which should offer benefit to an individual meeting or to the larger Religious Society of Friends
- At the end of the year, a copy of the completed project or brief research paper describing scholar's experience at Pendle Hill and the outcome of their research

APPLICATION PROCEDURE: Complete the Henry J. Cadbury application form and return it to Pendle Hill, Attention: Cadbury Scholarship Review.
