

Visioning and Creating a Moral Economy

December 1-4, 2016

A conference for inspiration, education, networking, and action

Co-sponsored by the Quaker Institute for the Future,
The Philadelphia Cooperative Association,
and The New Economy Coalition

Love for our planet and for future generations calls us to imagine and create a moral economy. Join in discussion, learning, and planning with other people of faith, leading thinkers, and those already making the Great Transition away from an unsustainable domination economy and towards one where basic human needs are met and all people's lives are valued.

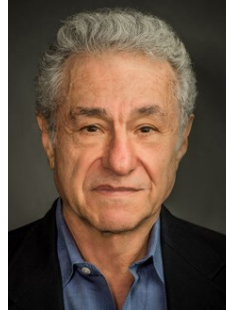

Beyond envisioning a moral economy, we will engage in strategic planning to realize the vision.

- ◆ What does a moral economy look like?
- ◆ What challenges confront us in realizing our vision?
- ◆ What opportunities do the precarious state of global capitalism and accelerating climate change provide to galvanize action?
- ◆ What intermediate steps are already being taken toward our common vision?
- ◆ How do we build on those efforts to establish them on a larger scale?

The conference will include plenary sessions with speakers and panels, open forum small group discussions, workshops, and whole group visioning and action sessions.
