

Dear Friends,

As the coordinator for this year's Young Adult Friends Continuing Revolution Conference focused on Peace and Justice, I have been under the weight of our charge: What does the Peace testimony mean to young adults today and how will we actively live into it? How can Pendle Hill create a program that helps us lean into our depth and power? What lessons are to be learned from our ancestors, our spiritual allies, and those most affected by intersecting forms of oppression?

With current concerns about Peace and Justice in the United States and the world, Friends of all ages are seeking methods for creating change from a spiritually grounded place. Pendle Hill joyfully strives to create a space where people can come together to focus on spiritual practices and community building, with the ultimate objective of co-creating a more peaceful, just, and sustainable world.

Pendle Hill is especially important to me because I know from personal experience how powerful and transformative its programs can be. I participated in the first Continuing Revolution Young Adult Friend program in 2012 focused on Stewardship. The intensive nature of the program is unlike any other Quaker conference that I have experienced.

The 2012 conference was deeply grounded in the Spirit and Quakerism, pushing me to the edges of my comfort zone. I was transformed.

Today, I write to you to ask if you will support Pendle Hill's efforts in continuing to offer essential programs that are socially relevant and spiritually grounded in today's world. I give to the Annual Fund because it supports the day-to-day operations of Pendle Hill, which has an immediate impact on helping maintain its core educational programs—such as the Continuing Revolution conference.

Will you join me in supporting Pendle Hill in this important work?

“This conference has had a profound effect on the way I view integrity, Quakerism and myself. It has given me a newly found self-confidence that I am who I am meant to be. It has reinvigorated my desire to help others and use integrity to help change the world around me.”

Continuing Revolution is only one of Pendle Hill's enriching programs designed to educate, motivate, and renew visitors, so they return home with the courage to follow their leadings with conviction and inspire others in their communities.

We need supporters like you to help sustain our essential programs, like Continuing Revolution, and to ensure Pendle Hill continues to hold space for seeking Spirit and strengthening connection for future generations.

On behalf of Pendle Hill, I thank you!

In the Spirit,
