Young adult Friends and seekers (ages 18-35) will gather at Pendle Hill to build community while interrogating the current economic system as well as the seeds of future systems that already exist and may introduce new ways to live in integrity with our core values.

Together we will explore our backgrounds and assumptions regarding class, money, and capitalism. We will look at how our economic system functions and its role in fueling inequality and oppression among people of different classes, ethnicities, genders, nationalities, and more. We’ll tackle questions such as, “How can I plan for a secure future while striving for a just economic system?” and “How does our faith lead us to be in integrity economically?”

Focusing on these and other questions, speakers and workshop leaders will guide us on a project of imagining a more just and equitable world, learning about and experimenting with the burgeoning systems, practices, tools and relationships that can get us there together.

Enjoy opportunities for reflection, sharing, worship, and skill-building with other young adults from a wide range of backgrounds and experiences in the nurturing environment of Pendle Hill.

For more information and resources, visit www.pendlehill.org, or email hmayer@pendlehill.org