Poetry Coffeehouses

Hosted by Jesse White

We are moving our monthly “Beloved Community” Poetry Coffeehouses online! Pendle Hill has offered interfaith poetry coffeehouses for over three years on its Wallingford, PA campus. They typically have employed an open mic format encouraging both emerging and established writers and featuring decadent refreshments. During this COVID-19 pandemic, we are shifting location and format, while holding on to the supportive, nurturing, and sustaining energy intended for our gatherings. Listen to a different Featured Poet perform each month. Then, write in response to the Featured Poet’s themes/ words and share with other attendees of the program. This one-hour poetry experience extends our community to a wider world and offers all writers a safe net for linguistic exploration and spiritual discovery.

Jesse White is the Arts and Spirituality Coordinator at Pendle Hill. She holds a B.A. in Integrative Studies: Creative and Spiritual Process joined with a B.A. in Psychology from Guilford College. Jesse works as an arts educator and art therapist and directs Pigeon Arts, a cathartic art-making organization in Philadelphia. She is clerk of Frankford Friends Meeting (PA).
